Set Rebate Plan For Heat Systems

The New York State Energy Office is offering a new $1.5 million rebate program to consumers who replace their old heating systems with qualifying high-efficiency furnaces or boilers, according to Assemblyman John W. Hasper.

The program, which is designed to promote energy efficiency and economy, is funded with monies recovered from oil overcharges in the 1970s. Rebates will be available to consumers purchasing oil-fired furnaces or boilers with an annual fuel efficiency rating of 86 percent or better.

To be eligible, homeowners or residents must not have received compensation under any other federal, state or local program for purchase of a new home heating system. No rebates will be made for new construction, mobile homes, or heating systems utilizing kerosene, natural gas or propane.

Residents upstate encountering particularly harsh winters may be able to save money through the rebate program, and may see lower heating bills in the long run, Hasper said. "Funding is being provided on a first-come, first-served basis. Residents should apply today to take advantage of potential savings on their heating costs."

Heating equipment dealers should be able to furnish a list of furnaces and boilers that qualify for the rebate program. For additional information, contact the State Energy Office toll-free hot line at 1-800-342-3722.
